As with many collectors and dealers, I'm sure; when friends or colleagues from my non philatelic business interests find out that I not only am a keen stamp collector but also have a business interest in two of the oldest and most respected stamp dealing firms in New Zealand they generally have lots of questions and quite a few preconceived ideas of what such a business is like. Most commonly they seem to imagine a small office or shop staffed by one, with a library of small leather bound reference books housed in an imposing bookcase with an antique desk upon which sits a pair of tweezers, a magnifying glass and perhaps half a dozen albums containing a stock of stamps for sale. They imagine a client who visits in smart suits and who peruse one or two albums from which they select a stamp for their collection before going on their way. While there is a hint of truth in this romantic notion of a stamp dealer the reality is really quite different, especially for a client visiting our Auckland offices. Even some of our most enthusiastic clients, who have not visited before, can get quite a surprise at the scale of our stamp dealing operation.

At CP and ACS the business of stamp dealing requires far more space than the uninitiated would think is needed to buy and sell something as small as a single postage stamp. As consignees of material for our public auctions and also very active buyers of stamps and postal history from all over the world, we accumulate huge volumes of material which comprises the good, the bad and sadly, the ugly. At times our 150sqm (1600sq ft) office feels as if it is about to burst at the seams. Some weeks we may have up to 50 large boxes of albums arrive for consignment or for an outright purchase. This material has to be carefully assessed, processed and then ultimately sold. It's time consuming, difficult and at times, very messy work.

We've heard of dealers with warehouses filled with unsorted, partially sorted or even unsold auction lots dating back decades and we do not see this as a viable strategy for our business. First of all, we're in the business of buying and selling and not hoarding (mostly!) and secondly, we'd hate to see the executors of our estates charged with the task of clearing out the CP/ACS office in the event of our unexpected demise. We always counsel our clients to ensure they have made plans for their collection in this regard and I believe it's always a good idea to follow one's own advice, where possible.

With this in mind the decision was recently made to have a 'serious' and 'ruthless' clear out of the office. This was by no means a small operation. I was booked for four days solid to work with David on this project, as was a 9 cubic meter jumbo bin – strategically positioned outside the office. The rationale was that this clear out would allow David and I to plan out the rest of our year as far as CP offerings, ACS Postal and Public Auctions and the much anticipated Saturday winter clearance sale while we operate in an environment that we believe will, at least in the short to medium term, be dominated by Covid-19.

The intention was to work through the entire office and process a large volume material that had been purchased over the past 5-6 years, but which had not been fully assessed. The work was difficult and painstaking. David was set up at a table in the centre of the office and my job was to unpack, pre-sort and then deliver the goods to him where he would sort and make the final decision on where the material would end up: Auction – CP List - Clearance or Bin.

Not surprisingly, the winner on the day was 'the bin' which was the recipient of excess cardboard, album packaging, old sleeves, binders and other non-philatelic material.

Editorial (cont.)

You may however also be surprised at what was also disposed of – over 500 albums – many still containing a few stamps, hundreds of first day covers, album pages with some stamps, hinges, accumulations of stamps, covers and even some postcards and philatelic literature. At the end of the four days, while the jumbo bin was completely full and the main part of the office was a lot clearer, the job was still not complete and within the few two months another four days and another jumbo bin will be required to finish the job. We're just waiting for our backs, necks and biceps to return to normal after four days of lifting – those large albums and old SG Catalogues can get pretty heavy!

So why did we bin so much philatelic material, I hear you ask. Surely it has a value? Surely it could be sold? The reason is quite simple and comes down to one very important word – condition. So often we find that the material that comes in and is ultimately purchased is good, sometimes very good, apart from the condition it is in – perhaps kept in a damp house, or damaged in the process of being moved or simply just not looked after as well as it should have been. The result is that this sort of badly toned or damaged material is just not worth the time, effort and energy to process, attempt to sell and if unsuccessful, be held in an office that is paying Auckland city rents. As such, and thankfully being largely paper, we made the pragmatic decision to send it off to be recycled.

Our big June clear out means we have now sorted a great deal of very good material that is processed and ready for future CP Newsletter lists, Auctions, and of course our next clearance sale to be held in Auckland on Saturday August 1. It's exciting to see this great range of material ready to be offered to our clients, at last.

So the lesson here, like always, is to make sure you look after your collection – big or small - so it is worth something when it comes time to sell. The market is strong and the future bright for material that has been well looked after.

CP's David Holmes midway through the ruthless office clear out.
